Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a detection system and an information processing system that use a touch panel. 2. Description of the Related Art A capacitive touch panel detects a touch position by measuring a change in capacitance that occurs when a human body comes into contact with the panel surface. A capacitive touch panel includes, for example, a glass substrate formed of an insulating material, and a plurality of line electrodes and a plurality of dot electrodes formed on the substrate. By applying a drive voltage to a line electrode or a dot electrode, capacitance between each of the line electrodes and the dot electrodes is varied. A touch panel is configured so that when a finger, a conductive pen, or the like comes into contact with the substrate, the change in capacitance between each of the line electrodes and the dot electrodes is detected by a detection section that detects a change in potential of a detection electrode. For example, the change in capacitance is detected by measuring a change in the potential of the detection electrode. The technique described above is known from Japanese Patent Application Laid-open No. 2006-251144, for example. As in the above-described related art, in a capacitive touch panel, the potential of the detection electrode is changed when a finger or the like comes into contact with the substrate. Thus, a detection section measures the change in potential of the detection electrode to detect a touch position. That is, a touch position is detected by detecting the change in potential of the detection electrode. In such a case, when a detection error, a change in potential due to noise, etc., occurs on the detection electrode, the detection section will erroneously detect a touch position. Accordingly, the detection error on the detection electrode is detected, so that a position of the detection error is calculated. In this case, the detection error is displayed on the display unit in the form of an icon, for example. In addition, the detection error is displayed on the display unit by a blinking or flashing technique. In this way, by displaying the detection error on the display unit, a user can visually recognize a position of the detection error on the detection electrode and a change in potential due to the detection error, and the 80eaf3aba8

Transport minister and lawmaker Cillian Murphy was part of a delegation from Ireland to visit the US, he joined parliament's cross-party committee of deputy leaders and party spokespersons on Tuesday to brief them on the progress of the programme, known as Wings of Ireland. The spokesperson for Clare Longford, the minister for transport and local government, says no date has yet been confirmed, although it would be up to the minister to make any announcement.

New US-Irish free trade deal could be signed by Trump presidency

Transport and Local Government minister and lawmaker Cillian Murphy says a new deal between the US and Ireland could be in place by the time Donald Trump takes office next year. "If we have a new president in January then we could have an announcement in early 2017," Mr Murphy says. The current Irish-US agreement is due to expire in 2021. "We've had a very close relationship with the US for a very long time and we would not want to do anything that would spoil that relationship." He says the agreement provides for "a very open trade regime in goods and services. "We are one of the largest economic blocs in the world, we've got a population of 4.5 million and we have 40 million citizens in the US, so it's obviously very significant that we have this agreement." Mr Murphy says the agreement is a "very important deal" because it will allow the two countries to make economic progress together. "We're talking about the future and how we can have a shared future in the world, in the face of the challenges that we have." He says economic links between the two countries is important but there is also a cultural dimension. "A lot of people in the US, myself included, have family that are Irish
